rates have been flat for a decade, although rates for Latin women are higher than other groups.

For both Asians and whites, birth rates now peak in the early 30s. In California, birth rates — particularly for Latinas — are tied more to nativity than ethnicity. U.S.-born Latinas average 2.2 children, slightly higher than other ethnic groups, while immigrants have about 3.7, with the number of children decreasing as education levels climb, Johnson said.

At 31, Linda Dong, an accountant who lives in San Jose, just had her first child. Asked about the timing, she said she and her husband wanted to complete their educations first and have a few years together before becoming parents.

Dong feels more ready now to be a parent both "financially and mentally."

"I'm pretty sure of that," she said. "I can't even imagine if I had had a baby at 22."

For Gomez, who is single and lives in Campbell, the choices weren't simple.

"We were the first generation of professional chefs in Mexico," she said, and she was on the first team from Mexico to make it to the Internationale Kochkunst Ausstellung, commonly called the Culinary Olympics, in Berlin in 1996. Her team won two gold medals.

Gomez doesn't expect to have another child. For now, her mother, Elsa, has come from Mexico City to help with the baby. But work calls.

"We're opening a brand new restaurant, Amaranta, in Sunnyvale, in one month's time," she said. "That's why I have to return back right away."

out $7 million a year cheaper — a net power production loss of $13.2 million a year compared to $20.2 million. Keeping the dams and trapping and hauling fish, along with conditions recommended by FERC, would produce $2 million a year in net power benefits. PacifiCorp's proposal for operating the dams, which carries the least improvements for fish, would produce net annual power benefits of $17 million.

Salmon advocates noted that removing all four dams produces the best improvements in water quality and salmon restoration because it removes obstacles that block 300 miles of spawning streams, drains reservoirs that breed toxic algae that pollute the Klamath River and eliminates conditions that promote fish diseases.

"The bottom line is they're saying removal is the best and cheapest alternative," said Glen Spain of Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, a California commercial salmon fishermen's group. The FERC recommendation "is not legally feasible" without taking into account the fish ladders.

PacifiCorp spokeswoman Jan Mitchell said "we'll need to review it (the document) a little more thoroughly."

proceeded in this case is going to be a very, very sad commentary on the enormous power of the government to ruin people's lives and to scar their reputation for no good reason."

Federal prosecutors have declined comment.

But Kevin Ryan, former U.S. Attorney in Northern California until he resigned in January, defended the investigation.

"I am unaware of any facts that support his claim that the prosecutors he was dealing with acted unethically," responded Ryan by e-mail.

Ryan shepherded the criminal cases against Victor Conte and others who were eventually convicted of roles in an illegal steroid ring for elite athletes. "In fact, from what I know, they acted at all times professionally and with the highest ethics."

Rains' counterattack comes as he and federal prosecutors prepare for what promises to be BALCO II — a celebrity extension of the steroids sports scandal that began in 2003 with the federal investigations into the Burlingame lab and its clientele of world-class athletes.

The latest incarnation of this high-profile, high-stakes legal showdown played out at the federal court building in San Francisco not far from the ballpark where Bonds set the all-time home run record in August.

If convicted, the former Giant faces prison time. But no matter what, his record-setting baseball career could be over. Rains said he wasn't sure whether Bonds would play again.

Bonds' reaction to the indictment was one of "surprise," Rains reported. The lawyer said the two had only spoken briefly on the phone, but they planned to meet in coming days.

Rains said he, too, was surprised at the timing and content of the indictment.

before the spill, he went daily, sometimes twice a day depending on the tide. He brought the catch home — even the big ones authorities say to throw back because of the mercury levels.

His wife Farm Yien Saechao wrinkled her nose when asked why, given the circumstances, she didn't buy fish at the supermarket.

"That fish is dead a long time," she said. "It doesn't have that sweet, fresh flavor."

Fishing also allowed the family to stretch its income. They get $1,500 a month from the government. Of that, $930 goes to rent, leaving less than $600 he let his license lapse.

These days, Seayang only fishes when friends are available to carpool to the North or South Bay.

They split the gasoline costs. "Nobody can afford to go by themselves," he said. Even then, he needs to catch about 8 fish to make the outing pay-off.

He recently caught crappie in San Jose. His wife minced it fine and blended it with fish eggs and chilies, a spicy, flavorful concoction they eat with rice. On the table, was green bean soup, squash sautéed with pork.

and a bowl of small brown mushrooms from Laos.

"There's not a good choice, really. If you go to the supermarket and buy pork, chicken, steak and vegetables, it costs a lot," he said.

"But if you go fishing, it costs, too."

ian 30 for invasion of privacy against seven newspapers, including the Los Angeles Times. A judge rejected it, and Sipple died in 1989 at 47.

Visitors sometimes gaze up at a quarter-sized gouge on an exterior wall near the north entrance of the St. Francis. It is said to be the spot where Moore's bullet ricocheted — a notion confirmed by a hotel employee who asked not to be identified.

Moore's attempt on Ford's life came 17 days after Lynette Alice "Squeaky" Fromme tried to kill Ford on Sept. 5, 1975, when she burst through a crowd at the state Capitol in Sacramento, dressed in a nun's robe with a .45-caliber pistol strapped to her leg.

Fromme pointed the weapon at Ford from two feet away. Although the gun was loaded, there was no bullet in the firing chamber. A Secret Service agent disarmed and handcuffed her.

Ford died Dec. 26, 2006, of natural causes.

Oldies, not goodlies

This law tries to protect music fans who buy tickets to oldies concerts from deceptive advertising. The legislation places requirements on performing groups to meet certain authenticity standards, such as ensuring that at least one member has the legal right to use the name of the original recording artist. It would not apply to "tribute" groups.

Oh, big brother

This law, also written by itian, bans employers or anyone else from requiring employates with less than $10 left in value.

Undocumented tenants

Cities and counties no longer can require landlords to obtain and report the immigration status of tenants. It also prohibits ordinances preventing landlords from renting to illegal immigrants.

HIV testing

The measure drops a requirement that patients have to fill out a form to be tested for HIV and AIDS. Patients now only have to give a doctor verbal consent to add HIV to other conditions for which they are being tested.

Homeless shelters

county survey shows nearly 6,000 law enforcement officials a year from the state would use this facility — paying fees to the county and boosting the economy.

The county's proposal is one of 10 that various government agencies and nonprofit groups have pitched for the weapons station, a 5,000-acre property for which the city of Concord is now in the midst of planning new uses.

The Emergency Responders Complex, which the county prefers to build between Clyde and Highway 4, would provide training facilities replicating virtually any public safety incident.

A machine-operated stream would allow firefighters to save people in fast-moving water. Officers would practice their enforcement driving skills on paved and off-road tracks. A five-story training tower would have a dual purpose — one day firefighters could extinguish high-rise flames, the next day a SWAT team could use it to practice rappelling.

The complex also would include an indoor shooting range, police K-9 training site, and props to simulate plane crashes, trench fires, chemical spills and collapsed buildings. The county would plan to move its Fire District headquarters, fire dispatch center and a backup emergency operations center to the site.

Drawing up the facility's wish list is the easy part. Finding a way to pay for it as the county struggles with long-range financial planning is the hard part.

Even if the Navy gives 120 acres to Contra Costa County for free through a public benefit conveyance, construction costs would add up to $203 million. This comes at a time when supervisors are trying to devise ways to pay a $2.6 billion bill — twice the amount of the county's annual budget — for

The training complex is not an all-or-nothing proposal and could be scaled back if funding comes up short, said Supervisor Susan Bonilla of Concord.

"You want to include everything you could possibly want in your proposal," she said. "Then we can make some choices of what we can afford. This facility will (ensure) that our own local law enforcement personnel are receiving the very best level of training."

To fund the Emergency Responders Complex, the Fire District would look to sell its headquarters in Pleasant Hill, a 40-year-old training center in Concord and a vacant 12-acre parcel along Highway 4 in Antioch. Those sales would net between $22 million and $27 million, according to a consultant's report.

The county would potentially look to bonds, federal Homeland Security grants and developer impact fees to cover the rest of the construction and equipment costs, said Dale Varady, a retired Contra Costa sheriff's captain working on the project.

The Sheriff's Department also would save money by ending a lease for its 2.5-acre training site in downtown Pittsburg, he said.

The county's Emergency Responders Complex is competing with nine other proposals for free or discounted land at the weapons station. Some other ideas include a Cal State East Bay campus, a 3,000-acre regional park and 210 residential units for the homeless.

The Concord City Council plans to make recommendations as early as this summer, with the Navy holding the ultimate authority to agree to all, some or none of the proposals.

"If we could get a site and it works out, I think it would be advantageous to the public safety community," said Concord Mayor Bill Shinn, a retired sheriff's commander.

Celebrity lawyer, alleged taunting enter tiger fray

SANTA CRUZ
CHURCH PLANS
REVIEW: The steeple
it for Live Oak's square-foot "green"

*By Julia Prodis Sulek, Dana Hull
and Linda Goldston
MEDIANEWS STAFF*

It happened at the zoo, but the story of the San Francisco tiger attacks is turning into a circus. The Christmas Day mauling at the San Francisco Zoo that killed a San Jose teenager and injured his two friends has drawn media from as far as China and Brazil and sparked headlines in New York City tabloids.

Celebrity lawyer Mark Geragos has signed on to represent the two San Jose brothers who survived Tatiana the Siberian tiger's attack. Meanwhile, San Francisco crisis-control guru Sam Singer was just brought in to be the zoo's frontman.

The case against the zoo and the city of San Francisco, which funds it — both in court and out of it — is sure to be a doozy.

On Wednesday, zoo officials held a news conference ostensibly to announce the reopening of the zoo today after eight days of lockdown since the tiger killed one young man and injured the two others.

But they used the media spotlight to refute Geragos' claims that zoo employees were hesitant to act when his clients frantically sought help from the rampaging tiger.

To the contrary, zoo director

MANUEL MOLLINEDO, executive director of the San Francisco Zoo, holds a copy of new signs that were posted around the zoo Wednesday. The signs ask visitors to be respectful of the animals.

brothers reportedly were reluctant to talk to police or to Sousa family, who have tried repeatedly to talk to them about what happened at the zoo that day.

As much tragedy and intrigue surround the sensational case, legal experts say they would not be surprised if the case never goes to court.

Since the city of San Francisco will be the primary defendant, it likely will settle.

But the case will revolve around two fundamental issues: liability and damages.

No matter what the young men might have done to provoke the tiger, legal experts say the zoo is responsible to keep the tiger confined.

If it escapes, the zoo is "strictly liable," said Peter Keane, a law professor at San Francisco's Golden Gate Law School.

Zoo employees did find an empty vodka bottle in the brothers' car, said Singer, who has been the spokesman for such newsmakers as 49ers owners John and Denise DeBartolo York and the former mistress of San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom.

But whether the trio had been drinking before going into the zoo will not be known until after the results of toxicology tests are released, said San Francisco police Sgt. Steve Mannina.

The case has drawn scores of media, from NBC's "Today" show to CNN, to the zoo as well as to Pipe Dream Court, the east San Jose cul de sac full of tightly packed duplexes where the Dhalliwals live with their parents.

But the Dhalliwals have kept their blinds shut and have not answered knocks on the door.

"If you have a wild animal and you keep it and it gets out of your control, you're liable," said Keane.

However, he said, any evidence of taunting could influence how much the zoo pays out in damages to the victims.

If the case goes to court and a jury finds that the young men taunted the tiger and were partially responsible for the attack, the amount of the jury award can be reduced.

"If they just stood there and said, 'nah nah nah nah nah, you're a lousy tiger,' that would be one thing," Keane said. "The taunting itself would have to be some kind of conduct that a reasonable person would know would be dangerous, like going up on top of the fence and trying to lure the thing out. It would have to be more than throwing peanut shells at the tiger."

Truckers Question Port Plan

By Post Staff

Oakland Assemblymember Ron Swanson, who also serves as Chair of the Assembly Committee on Labor and Employment, held a hearing to investigate pollution and working conditions in the Port of Oakland's trucking industry. Testimony was given by members of public health, environmental, labor, and community leaders, as well as trucking company executives, and the unveiled its "Truck Manifesto."

Assemblymembers Loni Hancock and Sandre Swanson conducted hearing in Oakland.

Omar Benjamin, the Port's Executive Director, indicated that the Port of Oakland proposes to require truck owners to meet all of the new environmental and security standards.

Critics allege that the Port's plan continues to place the financial burden on the 1,500 "independent contractor" port truckers who, after expenses, make an average annual salary of only about $30,000 with no health insurance. Drivers would have to pay a proposed $3,000-6,000 annual fee and be penalized additional fees for running dirty trucks. Some of the drivers in attendance told the Post that the Port's plan would move them further into poverty, and make it even less likely that they would be

"This is a common thing for California that we're going on this roller coaster ride. What we have to do is fix the budget system."

— Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger

■ Governor's decision may result in 10 percent 'across-the-board' cuts in services and programs

MEDIANEWS SACRAMENTO BUREAU
SACRAMENTO — Facing a projected $14 billion budget deficit, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger said Friday that he will declare a fiscal emergency, which will allow the governor and lawmakers to cut spending more quickly and also sets the stage for slashing state services and programs perhaps by as much as 10 percent. Legislative leaders said they will meet with Schwarzenegger next week to begin working on what the governor described as "across-the-board" cuts. His aides said departments have been told to prepare for a range of possible cuts, with 10 percent as a central figure. "We are going to call this January for a fiscal emergency when the legislators come back," Schwarzenegger said. "We will make that announcement next week sometime with the legislative leaders."

California's fiscal crisis, which is beginning to approach levels that undid recalled Gov. Gray Davis, is due primarily to a collapsed housing market and related woes in the subprime mortgage industry.

It also doesn't help that while the state's revenues are especially volatile — disproportionately reliant on income taxes —

■ Defendants accused of plotting attacks while in state prison

SANTA ANA — Two men accused of plotting behind prison walls to launch attacks on military sites, synagogues and other targets in 2005 pleaded guilty Friday to conspiring to levy war against the United States.

Kevin James, 31, and Levar Haley Washington, 28, both pleaded guilty to seditious conspiracy charges.

Washington also pleaded guilty to using a firearm to further that conspiracy.

Authorities say James, Washington and two others were part of a California prison gang cell of radical Muslims who were planning attacks in the Los Angeles area.

"Homegrown terrorism remains a grave concern to the security of our country, and this cell was closer to going operational at the time than anyone since 9/11," Los Angeles Deputy Police Chief Michael Downing told reporters at a news conference after the two men entered their pleas.

Prosecutors say James even had a press release prepared to send out after an attack.

"This incident is the first in a series of incidents to come in a plight to defend and propagate traditional Islam in its purity, James is accused of writing in his public statement. "We are not extremists, radicals or terrorists. We are only servants of Allah."

The plotters were within weeks of being able to carry out an attack when they were uncovered in July 2005 by police investigating a string of gas station robberies, Torrance Police Chief John Neu said.

Authorities said the men committed about 10 holdups to fi-

Washington faces as many as 20 years in prison on the conspiracy charge and five years to life for the firearms offense when he is sentenced April 28.

Prosecutors said Washington used a shotgun to rob a Torrance gas station on July 4, 2005.

Both men said little during their separate courtroom hearings, answering U.S. District Judge Cormac Carney's questions with one-syllable responses.

Washington's attorney, Ellen Barry, said outside court that her client decided it was "in his best interests" to plead guilty. James' attorney, Robert Carlin, declined to comment.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Greg Staples said as a result of the plea agreement, James' maximum possible sentence was reduced from 25 years to 20.

U.S. attorney spokesman Thom Mrozek said prosecutors would recommend an 18-year sentence for James and 25 years for Washington.

Also indicted in the case were Gregory Vernon Patterson and Hammad Riaz Samana. Samana is a Pakistani national, and the others are U.S.-born Muslim converts.

Patterson and Samana are charged with conspiracy to levy war against the U.S. government through terrorism, conspiracy to possess and discharge firearms in a violent crime, conspiracy to kill members of the U.S. government uniformed services, and conspiracy to kill foreign officials.

Patterson is also charged with a robbery count and using a firearm in a violent crime.

U.S. Attorney Thomas O'Brien said Samana has been declared mentally unfit to stand trial and is undergoing psychiatric care at a federal prison facility. Patterson is expected to plead guilty to a terrorism conspiracy charge on Monday.

The terror plot was orchestrated by Washington, Patterson and Samana at the behest of James, an inmate at the California state prison at Folsom, near Sacramento, who founded the radical group Jamiyyat UJ-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, authorities said.

Washington converted to Islam while imprisoned with James, then looked to recruit other members for the group, authorities said.

NAPA — The Napa Valley Unified School District and the American Civil Liberties Union announced Friday the settlement of a free speech lawsuit concerning one middle school's dress code that, among other things, prohibited jeans and "Winnie the Pooh" socks.

At issue was Redwood Middle School's former dress code, which barred students from wearing many popular clothing styles. The policy restricted colors, fabrics and patterns commonly seen on public school campuses.

The dispute made national headlines when seventh-grader Toni Kay Scott was removed from class in 2006 for wearing a denim skirt and socks with the Winnie the Pooh character Tigger. Her sister was reprimanded for wearing a T-shirt with the words "Jesus Freak."

Parents and students complained about the policy, which they felt was overly strict. The district argued the "school uniform" rule — in effect since the mid-1990s — was necessary to prevent gang violence.

In fall 2005, a group of parents tried to "opt out" of the policy, sending their children to school in their everyday clothes with notes from home. Several students were cited anyway, including Scott.

"I absolutely hated the old policy," said Donnel Scott, Toni Kay's mother. "It frustrated me that we as parents couldn't put our kids in clothes they would wear every day. I couldn't determine what was appropriate for my child to wear."

According to the settlement agreement, any future dress codes that limit colors, fabrics or patterns will allow parents to opt out. Additionally, the district will no longer prohibit lettering and pictures on clothing unless such gauge morass has engulfed online loan firm that said it intends to chop more than 100 jobs from its Pleasanton headquarters in a wrenching and broad effort.

Employees were notified at their homes that they would be dismissed. The firm, based in San Francisco, gave employees 60-days notice that they would be terminated. Popular brought E-Loan in 2005 for $300 million.

E-Loan intends to cut 100 of the roughly 925 jobs at its headquarters in the East Bay, said Laurie Azzano, a spokeswoman for Pleasanton-based E-Loan.

"It's a challenging mortgage climate for all of us right now," Azzano said.

Over the last year, 8,100 East Bay jobs in four key industries tied directly to housing — residential construction, specialty trades construction, real estate and credit intermediation — have vanished.

In October alone, three mortgage companies eliminated 325 jobs. One of those firms, Diablo Funding Group, ceased operations. This month, failures in home equity loans forced Concord-based Cal State 9 credit union into a state-ordered conservatorship.

Even worse, the more recent job cuts and corporate shutdowns suggest the housing market ailments have infects a steadily widening array of businesses and consumers. The afflictions have spread well beyond the subprime mess. The retrenchment at E-Loan underscores that E-Loan is not a subprime lender, Azzano said. "The company has a higher quality borrower. These layoffs are not a result of the subprime industry in particular but the mortgage problems as a whole."
